

COMPANY CEO JOINS NCPPP's BOARD OF DIRECTORS

James O'Brien of Strategic Technology Concepts, LLC joins NCPPP Board of Directors

West Chester, PA, July 1, 2010- Strategic Technology Concepts, LLC is excited to announce the National Council for Public-Private Partnerships (NCPPT) has a new addition to their Board of Directors, James O'Brien. James O'Brien is the founder and President/CEO of Strategic Technology Concepts in West Chester, PA. "Public-Private partnerships look to be a viable and important solution in today's necessity to improve the ailing infrastructure needs in our nation.", states O'Brien.

The National Council for Public-Private Partnerships (NCPPT) is a non-profit, non-partisan organization founded in 1985. The mission of NCPPT is to advocate and facilitate the formation of public-private partnerships at all levels of government; federal, state and local. In addition NCPPT works toward raising awareness of governments and businesses joint efforts to create a cost effective and quality service or facility to benefit the citizens of their governance and community. Today the NCPPT membership includes almost 200 organizations, forty-five percent of which are in the public sector.

Strategic Technology Concepts (STC) is a technology company dedicated to providing collaborative solutions to our pressing infrastructure improvement needs that will ensure the continued mobility of people and goods along an improved highway system. STC is helping to meet those needs by developing client-focused, computer-based systems that deliver comprehensive solutions to the growing need for permanent infrastructure revenue stream solutions.

For further information about Strategic Technology Concepts, please contact Kate LaCorte at klacorte@stconcepts.com.

###